BRIEF

Some ex-NFL players seek to re-work $1 billion concussion settlement

Lawyers representing some former NFL players urged a federal appeals court on Thursday to scrap the league's $1 billion concussion settlement because it does not cover potential victims of a degenerative brain disease linked to repeated blows to the head.

The deal should include future payments for chronic traumatic encephalopathy (CTE), a disease found in a growing number of players after their deaths, the lawyers told the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia.

The settlement unfairly favors currently injured retirees and ignores a potential 19,000 players who have yet to be diagnosed with neurological diseases, critics of the deal claim.

About 5,000 players are part of a class-action lawsuit that contends the National Football League was deceptive in hiding the dangers of concussive brain injuries.

The current deal, approved by April by Federal District Court Judge Anita Brody, provides payments of up to $5 million for former players diagnosed with certain neurological disorders. It also provides medical monitoring and concussion education.

About 99 percent of the class members accepted the deal, meaning they have not opted out. If approved in its current form, the settlement could cost the NFL $1 billion.

The small number of dissenters say it is a mistake to not include CTE and its symptoms, which include suicidal thoughts.

Autopsies found that some former NFL players who have committed suicide, including Junior Seau in 2012 and Adrian Robinson in 2015, had contracted CTE. REUTERS

Philly may drop 'sanctuary' city status

Mayor Nutter is considering an about-face of an immigration policy he advocated last year.

SAM NEWHOUSE
@scnewhouse
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Friday is the deadline for public commentary on a drafted executive order by Mayor Michael Nutter that would effectively resume city cooperation with federal immigration authorities, ending Philly's status as a sanctuary city.

"Mucho miedo [fear]" is how Estela Hernandez, 34, a leader with New Sanctuary Movement, described her reaction to the news. Hernandez participated in protests of the potential change Monday, and more protests are planned Friday.

Last year, Nutter signed an executive order ending the policy of city cooperation with so-called Immigrations & Customs Enforcement (ICE) holds, except in the case of violent felons sought with judicial order. Months of community meetings and hearings were held before the order was issued.

ICE holds, requests from federal authorities to local law enforcement to detain suspected undocumented immigrants, were widely criticized as having a chilling effect on immigrant communities, who feared any interaction with police could lead to a "hold" being placed on them.

"I have had very positive personal experiences as a result of last year's policy," Hernandez said, through a translator. "Recently, my husband was assaulted close to my house, and I wasn't afraid to call the police because of the policy. The police officer who came when we called was a good person and he helped us. With any changes to the policy, fear is just going to return."

Nutter has not yet decided whether or not to sign the order. The change would put Philadelphia in compliance with ICE's Priority Enforcement Program (PEP) by notifying immigration authorities in certain cases when immigrants are leaving jail, said a spokesman for Nutter.

Under PEP — which replaces the widely criticized Secure Communities program, under which holds were issued — a broad enforcement mandate is replaced by a focus on narrower categories, including violent criminals, gang members, people who pose a risk to national security or who are caught crossing the border.

Regardless of Nutter's decision, mayor-elect Jim Kenney has vowed to undo any changes to the city's policy on ICE hold when he takes office in six weeks, his spokeswoman confirmed.

Nutter's spokesman Mark McDonald called the new order a "minor change." He said the proposed order would lead to city officials notifying ICE when a person convicted of serious crimes is being released from jail.

"It's very strange, six weeks left to go, suddenly changing your policy that you made very public statements about being committed to," observed Temple law professor Jennifer Lee.

Jan Ting, a Temple law professor, said he believes the change may have been sparked by incidents like the death of Kathryn Steinle in San Francisco.

"I think he wants to make this change even though the incoming mayor has said he is going to restore the policy as it was because then, it will be Mayor Kenney's policy," Ting said. "If things go bad in the future, Mayor Kenney will get blamed and not Mayor Nutter."

Steinle, 32, was shot dead by an immigrant who had previously been deported five times, had been arrested for drugs in San Francisco and after serving his term was released rather than being deported — just three months before he killed Steinle.

The incident was among those that sparked a wave of federal and state-based legislation against sanctuary cities. A federal bill to block funding for sanctuary cities was voted down in the U.S. senate in October.

Immigrant advocates see this change as having a potentially similar effect.

"You can't run policy on the basis of outlier events no matter how tragic they may be," said Temple law professor Peter Spiro, referring to the San Francisco event.

"Localities have had such a terrible experience with Secure Communities that even when its packaged under a different name and with different circumstances, there's really a fear that it is going to impact immigrant communities in a way that is unfair."

Help Metro make magic

Tony's Metro Magic collecting toys for kids in NYC, Boston and Philadelphia

In keeping with the holiday spirit of giving, Metro is once again launching Tony's Metro Magic, our annual toy drive for underprivileged children in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

This year marks the 6th anniversary of the toy drive, which was renamed in memory the man who oversaw the project for more than four years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief. Metcalf passed away in 2013 from colon cancer at the age of 50.

Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts. It is our goal to keep that magic alive.

We are now asking readers to contribute what they can to Tony's Metro Magic.

Metro has created a wish list at the Target website that readers can access by going to Metro.us and clicking on the Tony's Metro Magic logo.

From there, just choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Target's secure payment system, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be delivered to Metro's offices in each city.

So through the rest of November and December, both in print and online, we will be reminding readers to donate.

This season, we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season. METRO

A concert at Festival Pier. COURTESY OF LIVENATION

Festival Pier sees swan song

Developer picked to build condos on site of popular concert venue.

A.D. AMOROSI
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

In a November crowded with loudly made big deals (like Vetri Restaurants selling to Urban Outfitters), one local agreement was more of a whisper than a bang.

Festival Pier — the Live Nation-backed outdoor live music venue noted for its annual summer jam, The Roots Family Picnic — will close after 2016's summer season. The space will be developed into a mix of condominiums, restaurants and stores.

"It will be sad to see it go," said Philly producer/artist/DJ King Britt, who has played Festival Pier countless times.

"That's a fantastic venue. ... My favorite [show] was this last Roots Picnic, 2015 — by far the best one, and extremely well organized. I had one of the best sets I've had in a while, and there were nothing but smiles. ... It really helped surrounding businesses too."

Delaware River Waterfront Corp., the owners of Piers 27 and 27-and-1/2 at Spring Garden Street and Columbus Boulevard, have partnered with Jefferson Apartment Group and Haverford Properties (Jefferson/Haverford) for about 550 housing units, 30,000 square feet of retail and public space, designed by architect Cecil Baker and landscaping firm Olin.

Designs have not yet been finalized.

Charlie Houder, owner and president of Haverford Properties, one of two developers named to make changes at Festival Pier, said the firm was selected Oct. 30 for the job. "We are still in the process of formulating what the project will be and don't have any further details to share," Houder said.

"That parcel of land was always viewed by us as a redevelopment site when we concocted a master plan identifying several of our spaces for mixed-use residential and retail," said Joe Forkin, DRWC's VP of operations and development.

Forkin noted that before Live Nation took full control of the piers, the two lots acted as the city's vehicle impoundment lot and an incinerator that was environmentally remediated by the Army Corps of Engineers.

"The past eight years of Roots Picnics, the Beastie Boys, Replacements, hosting Mad Decent and Radio 104.5 Block Parties and Forbes Under 30 Music Festival — those were some of our best events at Fest Pier," said Geoff Gordon, Live Nation's regional president.

Questlove plays at The Roots picnic, which is held every year at Festival Pier. GETTY IMAGES

Forkin said Live Nation always knew redevelopment was a possibility; prime development sites often have "recapture clauses in their licensing agreements if a higher use should happen to come along," Forkin said. "We're committed to looking with them for spaces of equal size and quality amongst those we control."

Gordon said he agreed: "Our collective efforts will create something as good if not better than our current location."

All that and still, has anyone told The Roots?

"They started a nice tradition," Forkin said with a laugh. "We want to keep them down here, get them a new spot that satisfies their need and keeps crowds coming."

I SUPPORT REPUBLICANS' SCHOOL FUNDING PROPOSAL

I hardly ever agree with the GOP on anything, but an education reform proposal might make me change my tune … just this one time.

Pennsylvania Senate Republicans plan to vote next week on a proposal that would terminate property taxes as a means of school funding and substitute them with increases in the sales and personal income taxes of locals.

"The only solution is to eliminate them," Republican Sen. David Argall told the press this week in regard to not reforming property taxes. "It's based on, how big is your house? When did you buy it? How big is your lot? Did you remember to paint your door last year? I mean, that's crazy."

ERNEST OWENS

The Ernest Opinion

Philadelphia's youngest columnist

Award-winning multimedia journalist Ernest Owens is a keen observer of social, LGBT and race issues in Philadelphia. Follow him @MrErnestOwens

Argall launched the proposal and has the backing of some Democrats. Even if this doesn't go through, it's more promising than the $30 billion budget deal Gov. Wolf and Republicans flaunted last week. Details suggest it will include a hike in the state sales tax and personal income tax, revisions to the liquor and pension systems, and a cut in property taxes.

Let's just cut to the chase. Property taxes have and forever will be a visible sign of the haves and have-nots. The more you pay, the more you have, and that shouldn't be the case when it comes to supporting our public schools.

It's simple. If you believe sufficient public education should be a resource that every child in this state should be entitled to — then you should be willing to support fair and equal funding for it.

The model of property taxes funding our schools is inherently discriminatory and elitist. We know housing discrimination exists and the disproportion of wealth in our state is not diverse and/or distributed adequately.

"Good" and "bad" schools in American aren't solely defined by the quality of their teachers and programs, but by the ZIP codes in which they are located. Because the property taxes in rich ZIP codes pay for the schools in those ZIP codes, the poorer ZIP codes must simply struggle with less. And public acceptance of this will continue to set our society and students back.

I don't mind paying higher taxes for education because I know I won't be the only one doing it. There's a sense of fairness in knowing everyone collectively is contributing to help ALL kids — rather than just their own — get an education that will benefit our society.

Furthermore, such a tax increase, when funneled to schools, could help reduce other statewide problems across the board — including high dropout rates, unemployment and, possibly, petty crime.

If you want to improve the quality of life for our youth, you can't rely on a funding system that doesn't give all of them a shot to win.

Philadelphians have paid higher taxes on their cigarettes and liquor without madness ensuing, so why not more to finally help improve our schools?

Because property tax school funding is another form of "separate but equal," and our tax-dollars would be better off spent ending that.

More Mexican immigrants leaving US than entering

Most Mexicans exiting the United States are doing so voluntarily to reunite with their family or to start one, the report by the Pew Research Center showed.

Mexican immigrant famalies GETTY IMAGES

More Mexicans are leaving the United States than entering it according to a report released on Thursday, at a time when some Republicans, including presidential candidate Donald Trump, have taken a hard line on illegal immigration.

From 2009 to 2014, more than one million Mexicans and their families left the United States for Mexico, while more than 865,000 entered the United States, Pew said. The figures include unauthorized immigrants.

An increasing share of Mexicans says life north of the border is neither better nor worse than life in Mexico, Pew said.

The overall flow of Mexican immigrants between the two countries is at its smallest since the 1990s, Pew said.

The findings follow Trump's call for mass deportation of undocumented immigrants, a plan President Barack Obama has said is too costly and un-American.

Trump, a real estate billionaire who has been among the leading candidates for the Republican nomination in the presidential 2016 election, also said he would get the Mexican government to pay for building a wall along the border.

More than 16 million Mexican immigrants have migrated to the United States in the last 50 years, more than from any other country, Pew said.

From fewer than 1 million living in the United States in 1970, the number of Mexican immigrants peaked at 12.8 million by 2007, Pew said. The total declined to 11.7 million last year.

The drop is mostly due to a decrease of more than 1 million unauthorized immigrants from a peak of 6.9 million in 2007 to 5.6 million in 2014, Pew said. Still, unauthorized immigrants from Mexico account for about half of all U.S. unauthorized immigrants.

Pew has been tracking flows for about 15 years, said Ana Gonzalez-Barrera, a research associate who wrote the report. For its report, Pew analyzed government data from both countries.

Defying Obama, House passes tougher Syrian refugee screening

The U.S. House of Representatives, defying a veto threat by President Barack Obama, overwhelmingly passed Republican-backed legislation on Thursday to suspend Obama's program to admit 10,000 Syrian refugees in the next year and then intensify the process of screening them.

The measure, quickly drafted this week following the Islamic State attacks in Paris on Friday that killed 129 people, was approved on a vote of 289 to 137, with 47 of Obama's 188 fellow Democrats breaking with the White House to support it.

The vote came despite a last-ditch appeal for Democratic votes from Jeh Johnson, Obama's secretary of Homeland Security, and Denis McDonough, his chief of staff.

It followed a testy exchange between lawmakers and State Department official Anne Richard. Republicans responded with incredulity to her assertion at a House hearing that there is only a "very, very small" threat of any of the Syrian refugees being a "terrorist."

Cars will be clearly marked, so come early for the best selection. This is a ONE DAY ONLY sale designed to get the local community driving again.

Fred Beans' pre-owned inventory levels need to be reduced to make room for shipments of new models arriving daily. As a result, all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations are selling these overstocked pre-owned vehicles to the public at drastic discounts in an attempt to clear excess inventory.

Along with this huge variety of pre-owned vehicles, the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships in Doylestown features new Ford, Lincoln, Mitsubishi, Dodge, Chrysler, Jeep, Hyundai, Nissan, Subaru, Chevrolet, Cadillac, Buick, and GMC vehicles.

Fred Beans believes reviving the economy starts at home, and changing things locally will lead to changing things nationally.

Along with the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships' extra inventory, additional vehicles have been acquired at incredible prices for this sale from various banks, repossession companies, auto auctions, credit unions, lease companies, and rental companies.

The sale will make pre-owned vehicles available for as low as $999,* prices not normally offered to the general public. According to Fred Beans, "We want to give our customers a reason to believe in the local economy again. Someone has to look out for their best interest."

Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM to inspect the entire inventory and find the car that's right for them. Every vehicle will be cleaned, detailed, and fully prepared for instant delivery. On the evening of November 20th, after the close of business, Mr. Beans and his team will mark the special sale price on each and every vehicle. Because Fred Beans' customers are feeling the credit crunch right now, the Fred Beans Automotive Group has given the dealerships' financing managers the resources necessary to get most customers' credit approved on the spot.

The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships has $10 million in lending power, the result of over 50 years of strong relationships with the area's leading lenders. This means that customers with a less-than-perfect credit history can have their credit approved and drive home a quality pre-owned car, truck, or SUV by lunchtime on Saturday.

Even if a customer's credit report shows a bankruptcy, divorce, tax lien, slow payment history, missed payment, or repossession or if a customer is a first-time buyer, Fred Beans may get them approved.

This special ONE DAY ONLY sale will be held at all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations this Saturday, November 21st at 9:00AM.

Pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.* Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM for the start of inspection. The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships is expecting a high volume of customers for this sale, so be sure to reserve your spot early.

Customers wishing to trade in a vehicle are asked to bring their title or payment book for immediate delivery. Fred Beans will even pay off your trade-in in full, no matter how much you still owe on it.*

Massachusetts to ban fantasy sports sites for people under 21

The fantasy sports business has drawn increasing regulatory scrutiny over the past few weeks with state officials debating whether the paid daily games are gambling.

The fantasy sports website DraftKings GETTY IMAGES

Massachusetts would prohibit people under the age of 21 from playing paid fantasy sports games under a proposed set of regulations for the fast-growing, multibillion-dollar industry laid out Thursday by state Attorney General Maura Healey.

The proposals would also ban fantasy competitions based on college sports, prohibit promotions of paid fantasy sports on high school and college campuses and bar professional athletes, agents and others connected to pro sports from taking part in paid fantasy contests related to their sports.

"These are games that you carry around with you in your pocket and lose money at the touch of a button," said Healey, who served as co-captain of Harvard's basketball team and went on to play two years of professional basketball in Europe.

The proposals must be submitted to the secretary of state and will be subject to a public comment period before taking effect.

Massachusetts' approach is more restrained than that taken by New York, whose attorney general Tuesday sought a court injunction to shut down DraftKings and FanDuel, calling the games "plainly illegal."

Healey said it is unclear whether the contests are illegal under state law and noted that other state authorities, including the legislature or gaming commission, could take other steps to rein in the games in Massachusetts. The state has the ninth-largest population of fantasy sports players, according to a survey by Eilers Research.

"This is an important step to protect consumers."
Healey

A spokesman for Boston-based DraftKings called the steps "thoughtful and comprehensive" and said the company would immediately begin taking steps to comply with the proposed rules.

"We appreciate that, in addition to Attorney General Healey, a number of state regulators and other authorities are taking a reasoned approach to the Fantasy Sports industry that considers the interests of sports fans," DraftKings said in a statement.

New ISIS video threatens attack on White House

Islamic State militants released a video Thursday threatening the White House with suicide bombings and car blasts and vowing to conduct more attacks on France.

The six-minute video released by Islamic State fighters in Iraq applauds last week's Paris attacks, according to a translation of the Arabic provided by the Maryland-based SITE Intelligence Group.

The latest threat comes a day after the militant group put out a video showing scenes of New York City, which suggested it was also a target.

Islamic State, which controls a large territory in Syria and Iraq, has claimed responsibility for last Friday's attacks in Paris, in which 129 people were killed.

FBI Director James Comey said Thursday he was not aware of any credible threat of a "Paris-type attack" in the United States.

State Department spokesman John Kirby told CNN that Thursday's video was being examined to determine its "veracity." "Everybody here in the United States government are taking these threats seriously," he said.

Ex-Subway pitchman sentenced to 15-1/2 years

Fogle agreed in August to a deal with prosecutors under which he would plead guilty to charges of child pornography and traveling for illicit paid sex with minors.

"The defendant was obsessed with child pornography and sex with minors"
Pratt

Former Subway sandwich chain pitchman Jared Fogle on Thursday was sentenced to 15-1/2 years in federal prison after pleading guilty to child pornography and sex charges.

Fogle will be a registered sex offender, and agreed in court Thursday to avoid pornography and get sexual disorder treatment. U.S. District Judge Tanya Walton Pratt also sentenced him to a lifetime of supervision and a $175,000 fine.

Pratt went beyond what either side wanted: Prosecutors had sought a 12-1/2 year sentence, while Fogle's attorneys had asked for five years.

Fogle was remanded to the custody of a U.S. marshal, and Pratt recommend he go to a federal prison in Littleton, Colorado.

Dr. John Bradford, a forensic psychiatrist testifying for the defense at the sentencing hearing, said Fogle was mostly attracted to older female teenagers 16 and 17 years old, not prepubescent children.

Prosecutors countered the testimony by reading a text from Fogle in which he said he wanted younger prostitutes, "the younger, the better."

Bradford also said Fogle has an alcohol problem, and had a compulsive eating disorder that moved into "hypersexuality" after he lost weight.

"He traded a horrible food addiction for a horrible sex addiction," said defense attorney Jeremy Margolis.

Fogle spent $12,000 a year or more on prostitutes and had a number

California police officer fatally shot in department parking lot

A policeman was shot to death in Southern California while sitting in his car in the parking lot of his headquarters. Two men have been detained in connection with the killing, authorities said Thursday.

Officer Ricky Galvez was shot late Wednesday outside the Downey Police Department, about 10 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles.

Police said a fellow officer driving nearby heard the gunshots, saw a vehicle leaving the parking lot and gave chase, ultimately seeing the occupants of that vehicle ditch it in neighboring Montebello before fleeing.

Two men were detained in the area following a search, but have not been formally arrested, said Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Deputy Sara Rodriguez, whose agency is handling the investigation.

She said the motive for the shooting was not immediately known. Police have not released the two men's names.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Lt. John Corina told a news conference early Thursday that Galvez had been sitting in his car when two individuals ran up to the vehicle and at least one of them opened fire. REUTERS of extramarital affairs, prosecutors said.

Fogle cried during his statement before sentencing, saying his wife and children would never get over this.

"You gave your wife $7 million, she'll be OK," Pratt responded. Fogle's wife has filed for divorce, according to media reports.

Fogle said he acknowledges the minors involved had been gravely harmed.

Subway fired Fogle when reports of the plea agreement emerged. He has already begun to pay $1.4 million in restitution to 14 victims who are minors.

The prosecutors' sentencing recommendation left the door open for further charges against Fogle if other evidence emerges.

Authorities have identified 12 victims of child pornography in Indiana, along with two teenage victims of child prostitution in New York, according to court documents.

Fogle obtained and viewed child pornography given to him by his co-conspirator, Russell Taylor, which included homemade material involving victims in Indiana, prosecutors said.

Fogle has stated that he was sexually attracted to children as young as 8 years old, the government said.

He will now not be able to work or volunteer unsupervised with minors, and will be able to see his own children only with agreement by all involved.

US clears genetically modified salmon for human consumption

Health regulators cleared the way for a type of genetically engineered Atlantic salmon to be farmed for human consumption — the first such approval for an animal whose DNA has been scientifically modified.

Five years ago, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration first declared the product, made by Massachusetts-based AquaBounty Technologies, to be as safe as conventional farm-raised Atlantic salmon.

AquaBounty's product will not require special labeling because it is nutritionally equivalent to conventional farm-raised Atlantic salmon, the FDA said.

AquaBounty developed the salmon by altering its genes so it would grow faster than farmed salmon, and expects it will take about two more years to reach consumers' plates as it works out distribution.

AquaBounty says its salmon can grow to market size in half the time of conventional salmon, saving time and resources. The fish is essentially Atlantic salmon with a Pacific salmon gene for faster growth and a gene from the eel-like ocean pout that promotes year-round growth.

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Bummed that "The Hunger Games" movies are all done? We have some ideas to keep the dream alive.

Now that the "Hunger Games" franchise has reached its final act, fans will be searching for ways to get their Panem fix. Director Francis Lawrence has said he isn't opposed to spinoffs, and tributes will surely find creative ways to keep immersed in Katniss' world. But we're impatient, so we've imagined five ways the Games could go on right away.

Movies

How about a prequel giving us President Snow's origin story? There's so much we don't know about the man who ruled Panem. How did Coriolanus Snow become a ruthless leader? What motivates his cruelty?

TV

They could head to the small screen to put us behind the scenes with Cressida and Pollux, as the rebellion's resident filmmakers move on from war coverage to documenting Panem's rebuilding efforts. LIZ BROWN

Fashion

Net-A-Porter already teamed up with costume designer Trish Summerville on a Capitol Couture line featuring adaptations of designs from the movies. But aspiring to dress like the ruling class is rather crass, so we propose a District 13 diffusion line of unisex wear that doesn't oppress its maker or its wearer. NICHOLE JANKOWSKI

Theme park

We didn't make this up: Fans will soon be able to take a roller-coaster ride inspired by Katniss' train to the Capitol and a simulated hovercraft tour of Panem. Hunger Games theme park projects are in the works, including a re-creation of District 12 in Dubai.

How Jennifer Lawrence really is Katniss

She came from humble beginnings, the spotlight thrust upon her despite her obvious discomfort, and she went on to inspire a nation. Are we talking about Katniss Everdeen, Jennifer Lawrence's "Hunger Games" character, or Lawrence herself? How about both?

The parallels are eerie if you look closely enough. Lawrence first came to the public's attention in the critically acclaimed Sundance darling "Winter's Bone," which saw her scrounging around Appalachia, hunting and skinning squirrels and risking life and limb to provide for her younger siblings. It was basically the first act of the first "Hunger Games" movie, minus all the totalitarianism.

We thrilled with each new, elaborate red carpet gown, marveled at every acting triumph. We agonized over each death-defying pratfall before the cameras — until we realized her natural clumsiness was her greatest weapon. This girl really was on fire.

She even found herself in a real, honest-to-Panem love triangle, her heart torn between lanky, British "X-Men: First Class" co-star Nicholas Hoult and her first true love, working in awesome movies. Try as she might to make it work with Hoult, her thoughts — and often, her body — were clearly elsewhere, and if there wasn't an "X-Men" movie actually in active production, she couldn't make things work with Hoult. They'll always have Montreal, though.

As her work brought her more and more into contact with the Capitol — or, you know, Hollywood — she courted more danger, more scrutiny, more creepy older men — like Chris Martin — pawing at her. But through it all she kept her chin up, secure in her folksy dignity.

Now that the "Hunger Games" series is done, Katniss is free to pursue a happy, quiet life away from the spotlight. But when will Jennifer Lawrence be able to do the same? Hasn't she suffered enough, David O. Russell? NED EHRBAR

Gale vs. Peeta

Who holds your "Hunger Games" heart? It's the ultimate debate for "Hunger Games" fans. Whom should Katniss choose?

Gale Hawthorne

Pros:
- Plenty in common: hunting, the great outdoors, almost starve to death.
- He's the hot guy you want to show off to your friends.

Cons:
- He's an "ends-justify-the-means" guy, which is rough.
- Much like Katniss, he's full of anger and vengeance — and two firecrackers is trouble in a relationship.

Peeta Mellark

Pros:
- He's the baker's son — plenty of carbs any time you like.
- He's kind and generous, risking his life to protect the people he loves.

Cons:
- Short and nonathletic — he's dead weight when it comes to hunting and death battles.
- The brainwashing and attempts to kill Katniss are total romance killers, sorry. LIZ BROWN

The real Ilana Glazer

The writer, comedian and actress talks about her first big movie and what to expect from "Broad City."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

When we speak, Ilana Glazer is a New Yorker in Los Angeles. Historically there has been great animosity between the coastal meccas. But the "Broad City" co-creator — talking to us about a bit part in the Christmas Eve comedy "The Night Before," with Seth Rogen, Anthony Mackie and Joseph Gordon-Levitt — feels that rivalry is dying away. She even admits to looking forward to being bicoastal sometime soon, which might come as a shock to fans of her and Abbi Jacobson's very New York-centric show. Glazer tells us about doing her first big movie and reveals how "Broad City's" third season, premiering Feburary 17, will get more real.

This is your first big movie. Did you spend a lot of time wandering around, seeing how everything works at that level of production?
Because Abbi and I created "Broad City," we oversee every single part of it. I know how it all works. I know the different departments. It's interesting to not be in charge of it — that was the strangest part. It was interesting to not be the one giving all the answers. You learn how you want to do your own stuff and how you don't want to do your own stuff.

"Broad City" is such an institution now. How did that level of awareness affect your approach to Season 3?
With Season 2 we felt like we were finally able to root the characters. Season 1 was such an intro into this intricate world, and Season 2 had the world growing out. Season 3 has been a lovely continuation, going deeper and deeper into the world. It's a little more real this season. I'm excited about that. There are moments that are real and painful, real and sad. That realness heightens the comedy so much. I'm excited to see how it's received, not only because I'm proud of it, but because I'm excited to see if people accept that level of sincerity in their "Broad City."

There's a lot of serious writing about "Broad City" that says that underneath the jokes there's a lot of commentary about city life and race and class.
That's true. It's both intentional and not intentional. It becomes more true when people write that kind of stuff. It's not just a completely farcical world. They do live within the real world and have real moments. We can write it and shoot it and edit it, but then the conversation is still going on when it goes out, after it's aired. It's collaborative. The audience makes the product too with their responses.

I imagine it's fascinating for artists to read interpretations of their work that see more in them than their makers may have intended.
It's a magical feeling. It's like someone knows you in a way you didn't know yourself. At other times I meet people on the street who think they know me because of my character. I'm like, "No. You know that's not really me?" It is and it isn't.

Ilana Glazer plays a mysterious woman who messes with Anthony Mackie's Christmas Eve reveler in "The Night Before." COLUMBIA PICTURES

To the movies

You and Abbi are writing a movie that, interestingly, won't star either of you. How has it been to write for a different medium and not for yourselves?
The break from writing for myself is really rejuvenating, for both of us. We're working with Paul Feig and Jessie Henderson [director and producer of "Spy" and the new "Ghostbusters"] as partners, and they give us such amazing notes. It's a pleasure — it's a pleasure to get these notes. We've learned so much. When you force yourself to write a movie, it's super hard, because it's so long. But it is so much fun. This industry is so flexible. You can do that. You can write for someone else. It's a privilege to jump around in that way.

Straight outta Southeastern PA

Late '80s hitmakers Ocean Blue are touring again — but more calmly this time around.

CHRIS JORDAN
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

A few teenagers from Hershey found themselves in a rock 'n' roll vortex in the late '80s — and it was a lot wilder than they bargained for, says Ocean Blue frontman David Schelzel.

"One of the first big shows we ever had was opening up for the Smithereens in Harrisburg," Schelzel says. "We were starry-eyed teenagers, and these guys were wild. I'll never forget the encore when the drummer [Dennis Diken] took a pitcher of beer and dumped it on his head and started dancing around stage with it on his head. [I thought] 'Wow, this is rock 'n' roll.'"

Now, it's a new chapter for The Ocean Blue with the 180-gram vinyl rereleases of the band's first three albums, all from Sire Records: "The Ocean Blue," "Cerulean" and "Beneath the Rhythm and Sound."

The band will perform the first two in their entirety in a handful of shows across the country, including tonight at World Cafe Live and Sunday at the Chameleon Club in Lancaster.

In the late 1980s, the band's atmospheric and contemplative rock landed them on MTV and national tours. They also gained national notice for a Southeastern Pennsylvania "scene" that included Live and Innocence Mission.

"When we started in the late '80s, there were quite a few blues rock and hair metal and glammy things going on, but nothing like the kind of music we were making," Schelzel says. "Then there was a brief flurry of a lot of interesting original music that was working its way up in the late '80s and early '90s with quite a few acts — but then it kind of fizzled out."

The Ocean Blue, whose hits included "Between Something and Nothing," "Ballerina Out of Control" and "Sublime," had a sound more akin to Brit bands like the Smiths or Echo and the Bunnymen than the blustery bark of Seattle groups, which took over rock radio in the early 1990s.

The guys eventually went their separate ways but never really disbanded. In 2013, they released "Ultramarine" on indie label Korda Records.

"We're indie musicians now," says Schelzel, an intellectual property lawyer in Minneapolis when he's not playing rock 'n' roll.

"We are not as active as we once were, and I'm pretty much OK with that," he says. "I don't know if I want to go back to the intensity and the unpredictability of that, but I still love music — we all do — and we still love making it and recording."

'The Hunger Games' goes out grim

"The Hunger Games: Mockingjay — Part 2"

Director: Francis Lawrence
Stars: Jennifer Lawrence, Josh Hutcherson
Rating: PG-13

"The Hunger Games: Mockingjay — Part 2" is so humorless even Elizabeth Banks' Effie, left, is barely present. MURRAY CLOSE

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

"Mockingjay — Part 2," the closer of the "Hunger Games" movie quadrilogy, is bleak and powerfully humorless. Our heroes are tired, hollowed-out, ready to die. No one can be trusted, not even the noble revolutionaries. Even the happy ending tastes so grossly fake that it seems like author Suzanne Collins just threw in the towel and had mercy on her characters — the ones she let live, that is.

Of course, a chapter this despairing only exists because the franchise slowly worked its way there, starting from riot grrrl-empowerment origins. For what it's worth, Collins' series deserves to be carefully considered. It's very much a revolution saga for our era, when all seems lost. It's no surprise when certain lines — President Snow (Donald Sutherland) telling his subjects that our heroes "are coming to destroy our way of life" — echo tragic events that happened just last weekend.

And so "Mockingjay 2," like the equally grueling "Mockingjay 1," isn't much of a popcorn movie, even when it's half-pretending to be one. But it earns its bleakness and its pessimism, and if it works at all, it's as a particularly steely form of melodrama, though not about whether Katniss will pick Peeta or Gale, a decision performed arbitrarily, as if by a coin toss.

Lawrence has brought a wounded humanity to Katniss, but she's also someone whose face can fill a screen, doing very little but saying everything. Watching her, after some 10 hours of increasingly dour dystopia, has been more thrilling than any bit of ass-kicking.

In "Brooklyn," Saoirse Ronan plays a young Irish woman who emigrates to 1950s New York. FOX SEARCHLIGHT

"Brooklyn"

Director: John Crowley
Stars: Saoirse Ronan, Emory Cohen

The 1950s romance "Brooklyn" is the kind of melodrama that's easy to call simple, even as a compliment. But melodramas, at least the good ones, are never simple. Bubbling under their unassuming yet riotously beautiful exteriors lies a riot of emotions and complications and heartbreak. "Brooklyn" is one of the good ones, gorgeous to look at and deeply felt, and even sneaky about being smart.

It spins the deceptively basic tale of Eilis (Saoirse Ronan), a young Irish woman newly arrived in New York, who soon finds herself in a hesitant romance with Tony (Emory Cohen), a sweetly shy Italian-American with a permanent nervous smile and a thing for Irish girls. Eilis will, like all melodrama heroes, have to make a choice, between her homeland and America and between Tony and another meek suitor (Domhnall Gleeson) from back home.

But no choice comes easy, and every moment in "Brooklyn" is loaded with unease and mixed emotions. Colm Toibin's novel was adapted by Nick Hornby, a man of many words, who fills pages with cascading thoughts and anguish and self-deceptions. Here he pares everything down to the story. It's really a visual movie, from the warm colors and patient camerawork to the way it allows viewers to scan faces and body language to see what its characters are trying to hide. In that sense it's Ronan's movie. She has the kind of face that's perfect to film: deceptively placid but containing everything. Making a good melodrama in 2015 is hard to pull off without it seeming like affectation. "Brooklyn" doesn't feel like affectation. It seems like good melodrama, period.

Another raunchy Seth Rogen comedy about aging

"The Night Before"

Director: Jonathan Levine
Stars: Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Seth Rogen
Rating: R

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Seth Rogen and Anthony Mackie bro down in "The Night Before." COLUMBIA PICTURES

Seth Rogen is a ways into his 30s, far enough that he's already made a few films about what it's like to be a fun-loving goofball worried about getting old and mature. In fact, the shtick is already suffering from diminishing returns. The plaint in "The Night Before" isn't as pronounced or as deeply felt as it was in "Neighbors," in which Rogen played a new dad annoyed by how annoyed he's become by young people partying like he once did. Here, he's an about-to-be dad vexed that he can no longer relate to a longtime friend (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) who's still single, still underemployed and still sad.

For nearly all of "The Night Before," this anxiety is buried under an "Exodus"-sized tidal wave of raunchy jokes, loopy jokes and jokes about prolific recreational drug use. Rogen's Isaac heads out for the annual night on the town with Gordon-Levitt's Ethan and Anthony Mackie's Chris — perhaps their last time. It's bittersweet, but it's mostly raucous, reveling in graffitiing the Christmas movie in gross-out gags, scenes of Rogen stuffing his head with shrooms and coke like he was at an eat-off and a running joke about d— pics.

The sad part — including Ethan pining for an ex (Lizzy Caplan) he stupidly dumped — should be the heart. But it feels tepid and, worse, inevitably bound for a happy ending. That's fine, as there are plenty of distractions. But there are so many of them that the very real but tepidly handled unease about getting older feels more like the real distraction. Whether or not the sad-sack guy will get the girl doesn't stand a chance against a scene where Rogen vomits in a packed church while wearing a Star of David sweater.

"Secret in Their Eyes"

Director: Billy Ray
Stars: Chiwetel Ejiofor, Nicole Kidman
Rating: R

The 2009 Argentine thriller "Secret in Their Eyes" is the kind of movie where confident direction — and, for American viewers, the presence of subtitles — help distract from what would be a distractingly inane plot. It had pretensions, even noble ones, exploring grief and vengeance in a world now trapped in a moral gray zone. Its remake is even more lofty. It bears three acclaimed actors and an esteemed writer-director, on top of being an adaptation of an Oscar-winning movie. But it still plays like a dodgy cop show. Cast it with William Petersen and it might not seem so prestigious.

Instead it stars Chiwetel Ejiofor, an actor who always gives his all, even if it's the ludicrous doomsday what-if "2012." He plays a former anti-terrorist agent still investigating the 13-year-old rape-murder of the daughter of a colleague (Julia Roberts). "Secret in Their Eyes" tries hard, even righteously, to do good. Its hopscotching structure — splicing in giant, fat flashbacks to the initial events — shows how tragedy dooms its victims, even those who survive, to live forever in the past. The fine actors anguish mightily.

It's also a movie that forces Ejiofor to shout, Dirty Harry knockoff-style, with an intransigent boss (Alfred Molina) and shake down a guy with a barbell to the neck. Filmmaker Billy Ray made the cool-headed "Shattered Glass" and "Breach," but "Secret" usually looks and plays like a bad TNT time-waster, only starring actors whose shelves are stocked with awards. But it never loses sight of its deeper side. It's a thriller that's stupid in its particulars but still haunted by real ghosts. Call it a draw. MP

PICKING APART DEFENSES

FANTASY SPORTS

ADAM LEVITAN
alevitan@metro.us

Making tough start/sit calls is the most stressful part of fantasy football. I absolutely hate it, especially when being on the wrong side results in a loss.

Many times these decisions are so close that it's hard to go wrong. But not being aware of a defense's strengths and weaknesses is an unforgiveable error. It might surprise you to find out that the public perception of these defenses is vastly different from their actual abilities.

The Jets' secondary is a mixed bag with Antonio Cromartie looking old and Darrelle Revis looking better than ever. GETTY IMAGES

Not a Jag against the run

There's a major Jaguars stigma out there. That's understandable, as they've gone 37-84 over the last eight seasons. But that doesn't mean we should want to start running backs against them. The Jaguars rank second in Football Outsiders' run-defense DVOA, a metric that analyzes a unit based on schedule and is independent of volume. The Jags are also giving up just 3.30 yards per carry, tops in the league.

Buc up, son

Some owners are cursing Darren McFadden after a poor performance at Tampa in Week 10. Don't give up on him. The Bucs have quietly been excellent against the run all year, giving up just 3.56 YPC and earning a top-4 DOVA grade in rush defense. The way to beat this unit is through the air, where they have been going through corners at a rapid pace. It's not going to be a cakewalk for DeMarco Murray this week as the Eagles host the Bucs.

Away from Revis Island

Darrelle Revis has played as expected this year, dominating whoever is in his path to the tune of a 44.3 passer rating against. But the Jets have struggled elsewhere, especially when the ball goes toward Antonio Cromarite. Opposing quarterbacks have a 135.3 passer rating when targeting Cro this year. This unit also sees a ton of volume, as they have the No. 1 DVOA run defense. Identifying which wide receiver Revis will be covering and making lineup decisions off that will be profitable down the stretch.

NFL matchups

Danny Amendola vs. BUF — He isn't Julian Edelman, but Amendola has good rapport with Tom Brady and will see a boost in snaps/targets.

Marvin Jones at ARI — Look for Patrick Peterson to shadow A.J. Green and Tyrann Mathieu to swallow up the slot. That leaves Jones to roam free.

Jordan Matthews vs. TB — Mark Sanchez loves to throw between the numbers and loves Matthews, as evidenced by last season.

5 Things to watch as

The Eagles, almost laughably, can snag the division lead if they beat Tampa Bay on Sunday.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

The Eagles seem to have been handed a complete redo.

Last week, they had the chance to jump into the NFC East Lead by beating the Dolphins. Of course, that didn't happen when the Eagles relented a 13-point lead and fell, 20-19.

This week, thanks to a Giants loss to the Patriots and a bye this week, the Eagles have a second chance to get to the top of the sluggish and ugly NFC East division. They'll need to beat another team from Florida, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Eagles and Bucs are each 4-5, but have gotten here in seemingly opposite fashion. Philly could have a much better record if not for several fatal self-inflicted wounds made in key close games. Tampa has suffered a putrid defense and some early growing pains under new quarterback Jameis Winston but has battled to win four contests.

With the teams on a collision course and each looking to keep pace for a playoff spot, Sunday's game is big for both sides.

Here are three interesting storylines to monitor during the 1 p.m. game (on Fox):

Jameis Winston says DeMeco Ryans is one of his biggest role models. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

1 Playing with heroes

Winston, the first-overall pick and rookie quarterback for Tampa Bay, grew up in the same small Alabama town as Eagles veteran linebacker DeMeco Ryans. And as he told reporters earlier this week, Winston is inspired by his hero Ryans.

"It was always my dream [that] if I wasn't going to play for the Eagles, [I'd] at least play against them or have a chance to go against them," Winston said. "But one thing that is important about this week is I get to go against one of my hometown heroes in DeMeco Ryans."

Winston will realize his dream Sunday, as Ryans will play opposite him at inside linebacker.

Make a Mark in passing game

The Buccaneers have shown they are vulnerable to a passing attack. And not even necessarily a good one, as they were annihilated by both Kirk Cousins and rookie Marcus Mariota.

With Sam Bradford out with a concussion and shoulder injury, the Eagles passing attack is in relatively good hands in Mark Sanchez, who started eight games last season and has a command for the Chip Kelly offense.

"That is one thing about Mark — his work ethic," Kelly said. "He's in this building very late every night, he works extremely hard on the game plan. He prepares himself like he's going to be the starter, whether he's named the starter going into that game or it occurs in the first quarter, second quarter or third quarter. When he goes in there, he has to be able to function in our offense, so we don't have to say, 'Hey, we have to throw this whole chunk of offense out. We just only can go with this small portion of it.' We're allowed to run, because of Mark's understanding of what we're doing, we can run everything that we have in our game plan that week."

Mark Sanchez went 4-4 as a starter last season.

Doug Martin and the Bucs ground attack could be tough to slow down Sunday.

Catch the Muscle Hamster

Tampa running back Doug Martin hates his nickname. Perhaps the Eagles can get under his skin by calling him "Muscle Hamster" Sunday.

They'll have to do something to stop the running game, as the Bucs are sixth in the NFL in rushing, thanks in large part to Martin's 706 yards (and more than 300 more from backup Charles Sims).

The Eagles rank 18th against the rush, but have only allowed three rushing touchdowns (tied for second best in football).

College hoops

Temple basketball wins first of the year

Temple got their first win of the season and advanced past Minnesota, 75-70, in the first round of the Puerto Rican Classic Thursday afternoon, thanks to some stellar 3-point shooting and 19 points from senior captain Jaylen Bond.

After blowing two nine-point leads, the Owls overcame a ferocious comeback from the Gophers to hang on by making key free throws down the stretch.

Bond, who also nabbed eight boards, converted one of the Owls 10 successful three point attempts in 22 tries (a 45.5 percentage from downtown).

Devin Coleman and Obi Enechionyia each had three trays apiece and scored 15 and 14 points respectively in the win.

The Owls advance to the second round of an eight-team field and will play at 1 p.m. (on either ESPNU or ESPN2) against the winner of Butler and Missouri State.

Quenton DeCosey GETTY IMAGES

Freshman Trey Lowe (nine points) and senior Quenton DeCosey (12 points) each had noteworthy performances as well.

Temple football tries to get back on track

Temple's hopes for a New Year's Six bowl berth and conference title each took major hits last weekend when nationally ranked Temple was upset by South Florida.

Still boasting an impressive 8-2 mark, Temple will show what it's really made of against another team vying for a prominent bowl in 8-2 Memphis, at home at the Linc Saturday afternoon.

"Last week was disappointment for us obviously, but I think it can be a step forward for the program," head coach Matt Rhule said, matter-of-factly in a press conference this week. "Ever since Notre Dame we haven't played to the level that we're capable of. And as a coach that's on me, it's my job. I'm supposed to get the team to play as well as it can."

The Owls will clinch the AAC East Division title if it wins its final two games against Memphis and Connecticut, but one thing at a time. They need to get back in the win column.

"They know where they stand. They've earned the right to control their own destiny," Rhule said. "They won eight games. That's a credit, but we have to get back to playing better football."

After a 7-0 start to the season, Temple has dropped two of its last three games, starting with a heartbreaking setback against Notre Dame in front of an Owls record 69,000-plus fans.

Memphis will be yet another difficult test. The Tigers are the 21st-ranked team in the nation and had been ranked as highly as No. 13 in the College Football Playoff rankings before losses to Navy and Houston (a blown 20-point lead led to their demise against the Cougars last week).

The Tigers will head to South Philly as a 1.5-point favorite, but are playing for just bowl positioning while Temple is still contending for a division title.

As much as Rhule wishes he could will his team to play more like they did early this season, it falls on the seniors to lead the Owls. It's a group that has done a lot, but Rhule is hoping they still have more left to achieve.

"I think this would be their greatest accomplishment," Rhule said. "It's going to take unbelievable toughness to beat this Memphis team."

Kickoff is at noon on ESPNU.

Raiders, Chargers and Chiefs best bets in Week 11 action

A look at the best bets around the league for Week 11:

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@ItsGood2BeKing
sports@metro.us

Oakland Raiders (-1) at Detroit Lions
This game profiles as a shootout as both the Raiders and Lions play horrible defense (30th and 25th, respectively), but Detroit doesn't have the offense that it has had in years past to keep up with Oakland. The Lions are currently 27th in YPG and have mustered just 18.6 ppg despite QB Matt Stafford and WR Calvin Johnson playing in every contest this season. Meanwhile, QB Derek Carr and WR Amari Cooper have been putting opposing defenses to shame, leading the Raiders' eighth-ranked offense. Motivation also plays a big role in the selection of the Raiders this week. The Lions come into this matchup off a big win against the Packers, their hated division rivals, so this looks like a classic "letdown" spot. It's also worth mentioning the Lions, who traditionally host the early game on Thanksgiving Day, have lost on the Sunday before Thanksgiving three straight years (0-3 ATS). This line looks like a bargain.
The pick: Raiders -1

The best of the rest

Our picks in the rest of this week's games (picks are in bold):

- Denver Broncos at Chicago Bears (-1)
- Dallas Cowboys at Miami Dolphins (Even)
- Indianapolis Colts at Atlanta Falcons (-6)
- St. Louis Rams at Baltimore Ravens (-2.5)
- Washington Redskins at Carolina Panthers (-7)
- Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Philadelphia Eagles (-6)
- New York Jets (-2.5) at Houston Texans
- Green Bay Packers at Minnesota Vikings (Even)
- San Francisco 49ers at Seattle Seahawks (-12.5)
- Buffalo Bills at New England Patriots (-7)

Kansas City Chiefs (-3) at San Diego Chargers
The Chargers (2-7) have been a very unlucky team this year, often losing on the last possession of the game. Part of that bad luck is reflected in San Diego's -5 turnover ratio, and the fact that it has lost seven of its 11 fumbles on offense, one of the worst marks in the league. The Chiefs have only forced five fumbles this season, so it's unlikely that that will come into play. Despite scoring just 23.3 ppg this season, the Chargers are among the league leaders in YPG, thanks mainly to Philip Rivers and the top-rated pass attack in football. The Chargers should be able to dictate the flow of the game at home and pick up the win as an underdog. But the way San Diego's season has been going, take the three points for insurance. The pick: Chargers +3

Cincinnati Bengals at Arizona Cardinals (-5)
The Bengals put on an embarrassing performance last Monday night, scoring just six points in a loss to lowly Houston. Now they're back in primetime on Sunday night against the Cardinals and their third-ranked defense. The Bengals will need a whole lot more than six points going against the NFL's top-ranked offense by YPG, led by former Bengals QB Carson Palmer. Arizona has been bet down from -2.5 to as high as -5 early in the week, but that shouldn't really matter. The Cardinals are 5-2 ATS going back to last season as home favorites of no more than seven points. Don't write off the 8-1 Bengals entirely, but their chances to rebound off a bad loss against one of the NFL's better teams is one tough task. The pick: Cardinals -5

Week 11 features some interesting matchups

The 2015 season has been filled to the brim with injuries, demotions, promotions, etc. Never have we seen so many different players pass through the stat sheets. There are some key matchups that need to be at the top of your mind when you set your Week 11 lineup. Here are the important battles and how they could affect you.

Hopkins vs. Revis

The New York Jets rank 9th in pass defense (230.3 ypg) and Darrelle Revis is a big part of that efficiency. Revis has three interceptions on the season, but more importantly, quarterbacks don't often throw his way. With five games of over 20 FanDuel points on the season, you have to assume that even with an elite corner covering him, Hopkins will have a high floor in Week 11.

Watkins vs. Butler

Historically, Sammy Watkins does not produce when he goes up against shutdown corners. Last week when he went up against CB Darrelle Revis, Watkins caught three passes for 14 yards. In Week 1 when he faced CB Vontae Davis he didn't even log a catch. Stay away from Rex Ryan's weapon this week.

Keenum vs. Ravens

We have literally no idea as to what Case Keenum will look like as a starting QB for the Rams. He's yet to play a snap in the regular season. The good news for Keenum is that he's starting off as the team leader in the best matchup possible. The Ravens give up the 2nd most FanDuel points to opposing quarterbacks and the most to opposing wide receivers.

Raiders vs. Lions

Detroit gives up the 3rd most FanDuel points to opposing quarterbacks, the 10th most to running backs, 8th most to wide receivers, and the 8th most to tight ends. Oakland gives up the 6th most FanDuel points to opposing quarterbacks, 8th most to running backs, 15th most to wide receivers and the 2nd most to tight ends. Get ready for some offense.

Aries Make sure that you know where you stand regarding the beliefs and opinions of those around you. Don't invite a challenge that is impossible.

Taurus You'll be attracted to the unusual or unique. If you delve into something that you know little about, it will shape the way you move forward.

Gemini Avoid emotional matters if you aren't clear about how you feel. Get involved in something that you can do alone.

Cancer Go where the action is in order to meet interesting people. The knowledge and experience they have will be valuable.

Leo A move or change of scenery is favored. Do your best to get back on track and figure out what you want to pursue.

Virgo Revisit places that you have a strong emotional connection with. Getting in touch with old friends will be an eye-opener.

Libra Give whatever you do your best effort. Follow your creative dreams and analyze your current relationships. Decide what fits your plans.

Scorpio Your offbeat ways will interest a like-minded soul. Together you can develop something that will bring you enjoyment.

Sagittarius Too much of anything will make you look bad. Avoid indulgence and exaggeration if you intend to stay out of trouble.

Capricorn You are positioned for success. Put your plans into play in order to take onlookers by surprise. Refuse to let others' actions throw you off.

Aquarius Bring about a personal change that will boost your confidence and help you express how you feel to someone special.

Pisces Disillusionment will set in if you expect too much or pick up bad habits. Work on creative concepts and find a way to express yourself. EUGENIA LAST
